

The Daily Astorian.
ASTORIA, OREGON:
FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1881.
D. C. IRELAND, Editor.

Our Anniversary.

Eight years ago this morning the first copy of THE ASTORIAN was printed, July 1, 1873. Referring to the introductory remarks in our first editorial we stand by them to-day. Astoria has grown in importance since then. Perhaps not so much as we may have hoped; but when we look back at the town of July 1, 1873, and then look about us here, to-day, there is much cause for congratulation. The policy of THE ASTORIAN remains just as it began; liberal, independent, fearless, honest, and candid in all things; endeavoring to accomplish a good work for all Oregon. What we claimed for Astoria then as a Sea-port for the whole interior, drained by the Columbia, we claim to-day, and shall continue to advocate those claims until the world recognizes the fact; and this fact will be fully and emphatically endorsed before another eight years roll around.

Sessions, the Albany briber has been indicted, and is held in bonds for his appearance.

Germany is obtaining more than her share of the iron trade. Low wages and freights and cheap raw material enable her to undersell the English market.

Here is a fact illustrating the value of industrial exhibitions: Since the centennial, over a thousand printing presses have been shipped to France from Philadelphia.

One of the Parisian papers devoted to electrical science is of opinion that electric railways cannot be successfully employed except in tunnels or on elevated roads.

During the storm in Washington Tuesday night, twelve hundred and sixty shade trees were blown down, scores of buildings unroofed and damaged, four hundred street lamps damaged and all gas blown out.

Several hundred Scandinavians who went to the Sandwich islands under contracts made with Capt. Lorange, are held there in what is practically a state of slavery. The story creates a sensation and several communications have been sent to Norway and Sweden, warning the people against Hawaiian emigration agents.

The American colony in Paris is preparing to celebrate the Fourth of July by an entertainment surpassing in magnificence anything of the kind ever seen outside of America. A superb chateau, with grounds capable of accommodating five thousand expected guests, at Maison, and only half an hour by rail from Paris, has been granted for the occasion by the owner, a Russian nobleman.

Rumors have been rife in Albany during the past week in relation to the prospect of an early commencement of work on the railroad to Yaguina bay. The Democrat cannot yet state definitely, but seems to know for a fact that some very important dispatches have been received from the east, and that they intimate that work will commence in a few weeks. Surveying parties will take the field within a week. Arrangements have been made so that six hundred Chinese can be put to work on a few days' notice, and everything seems to indicate that at least something may be done. We hope so.

Piracy in the China seas has not been entirely broken up, notwithstanding the many foreign ships of war and the large number of steamers in those waters. The German bark Occident was boarded last month by the crews of two pirate junks, and plundered of all the money and other useful articles the pirates could lay their hands on. The complement of the bark consisted of only three white men and seven Chinamen, and the peculiar means used by the pirates to gain possession of the vessel—by throwing stinkpots and fire crackers on board of her—made resistance fruitless. Singularly enough, the pirates contented themselves with robbery and a little rough usage of the barks crew.

Pacific Northwest Rivers and Lakes

The Columbia river is said to carry off a volume of water equal to that of the Mississippi. Though not so wide, the current is more rapid. The channel is of great average depth. This river may be said to be in Washington territory. Though for three hundred and fifty miles from the sea to Wallula it is the boundary line, from the latter point it meanders northward through Washington territory, a distance of nearly 500 miles to the British line. After its passage into foreign soil, the river returns to the territory by way of Clarks fork, and meanders nearly south to lake Pen d'Oreille, a distance of over one hundred miles. The other great fork, Lewis or Snake river, comes in at Ainsworth, the present terminus of the Northern Pacific going east. This fork is a large and important river. Most of its great waters are also in Washington territory. But there is still another branch of the Columbia, along which the Northern Pacific will be running at some time—the Yakima, the valley of which contains lands of superior grain and produce raising qualities. This branch starts in the Cascade mountains and near the waters of Puget-sound, and runs southeasterly in eastern Washington. Many of these streams are fed by the mountain snows and for the most of the year afford cold and pure water. Though small by comparison they are navigable for small steamboats. In the old settlements the fine grass and farming lands along their margin have long since been occupied. The explorer will find, however, many fine lands in the back country along streams of similar kind. Among the attractions of our Northwestern territories are the lake regions. The lakes are numerous, many of them large, notably Pen d'Oreille, about thirty miles long north and south, surrounded by good lands and pine timber. The Northern Pacific will soon be finished to this point and afford an outlet westward. Near lake Coeur d'Alene, some forty miles from Pen d'Oreille, is the old mission and Coeur d'Alene reservation. Here is a beautiful country. The northern waters of Coeur d'Alene are some seven miles from the line of the Northern Pacific. Lake-Chelan, one hundred and fifty miles west from Pen d'Oreille and two hundred miles north of Walla-walla by way of the Columbia river, is forty miles in length, and situated in Stevens county, Washington territory. Back of Seattle, and but a short distance from it is lake Washington, twenty or more miles in length. Near Steilacoom, in Pierce county, are a chain of lakes, one quite large and a curiosity. American lake has no visible outlet, is the receptacle of several streams and never overflows its banks. It is likely the source of many fine springs pouring out through the hills far and near. Those who are partial to settlement near lake scenery can be accommodated in the Pacific northwest.
